COMMUNITY

Over the last five years we've been making the Marine an even more important part of the community by widening participation in arts and culture. We welcome performers from diverse backgrounds, so all members of the community are represented on stage. Recently we've relaunched the Marine Youth Theatre with bursaries, alongside Free Drama Days - an introduction to performing for children. There is something for everyone each month. We make sure there are free and cheap events. Increasingly we've created opportunities to perform or get involved with Community Plays, Sunday Sessions, Senior Creative sessions, volunteering, and Play Reading Groups. But if you just want to sit and watch, that's fine too!

VOLUNTEERING

Whether it's ushering, hosting performers, or even DIY, there are lots of ways to support the running of our busy venue. If you have time to spare and would like to get involved, please email friends@marinetheatre.com.

WELCOME

I can't quite believe it! Poet Laureate Simon Armitage is coming to Lyme Regis. This is a great honour, so I urge you to buy a ticket - they've almost sold out as I write this.

Repertory Theatre is when a resident company produces a series of plays in quick succession. It has a particular link to seaside locations, which is why I am chuffed that it returns to Lyme Regis this Summer. There are some real crowd pleasers with Dial M for Murder and Gaslight. The season is produced by Su Gilroy who works in the West End.

As the evenings warm up, it's pleasant to be outside and watch a show too. This Summer you can see As You Like It and The Secret Diary of Henry VIII as you look over the sea.

There's another fine selection of music from around the world this quarter. Sahra Halgan is visiting from Somaliland and has a performance lined up on 'Later....with Jools Holland'. Mandalitso are coming from Malawi fresh from Womad.

We're also delighted to welcome back homegrown talent at the Lyme Folk Weekend - a festival we cherish.

Enjoy the Marine!
